Local Postal Receipts Shows Gain

LAKESIDE RANKS 37TH IN U. S. SAVINGS BONDS

Every once in awhile our attention is called to the fact that our little "burg" is growing. Not a mushroom sort of growth, to be sure, but a good, steady, business-like growth with no recessions.

Our merchants report larger sales, our postal receipts are most satisfactory, and—true criteron of financial growth—the savings accounts of our people are increasing.

In Government reports, listing the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds for the state of California, and our little town of Lakeside ranks 37th among the 227 third class postoffices of the state for the year of Sept. 1, 1936 through Aug. 31, 1937. This is a showing to be proud of for a town our size.

An analysis of Bond sales made by the local office gives a variety of purpose for the savings,—rainy day reserves, old age security, education of chldren, purchase of homes, and safety of investment. Among the features most frequently influencing Bond purchase are safety, constant availability of the funds, nd the fact that Savings Bonds increase 33⅓ per cent in value if held ten years. Several local people are buying a bond per month out of current savings to insure themselves an income ten years hence.

In connection with this Savings Bond report of our own locality, the statistics given for the nation are most interesting, and prove that the Bonds, intended as a repository for savings in reltively small amounts, have gained a wide spread popularity nationally.

Some of the interesting figures included in this report are:

More than a million and a quarter citizens now own Savings Bonds.

Average daily cash sales are $1,576,110.00 (maturity value $2,101,500.00)

Average per capita for nation $3.81.

Average per capita for California

'Smilin Through' to be Presented at Grossmont Apr. 7

"Smilin' Through," one of the most beloved of American plays, will be presented by the Alumni Association ot Grossmont High School, in the Grossmont Auditorium, next Thursday evening, April 7. The Alumni play is traditionally one of the dramatic highlights of the school year, the proceeds going toward a scholarship awarded to some worthy graduating Grossmont senior.

"Smilin' Through" tells the love story of Kathleen Dungannon and Kenneth Wayne. Their romance is thwarted because of an ancient grudge held by Kathleen's uncle, John Carteret, against Wayne's father, who years before, in a jealous rage had killed Moonyeen Clare on the eve of her wedding to Carteret. How the guardian uncle's hate is overcome and the lovers are united forms one of the most gripping and appealing love stories ever written.

An excellent cast of talented Grossmont graduates playing this most appealing story will doubtless give you a most enjoyable evening next Thursday. Karl Bush, who turned in such a splendid performance in "Petticoat Fever," and Thelma McCarthy, well known for her acting ability, share the stellar honors. Wesley Kelley, Lee Clapham, and Olive Hockaday will also have leading roles. Others of the cast follow: Lawerence Powell, Don Pearson Adalaida Treganza, Mary Anne Bliss, Lois Masterson, Elsie Moriarty, Dorothy McCarthy, Betty Anne Jackson, Margie Kephart, Harold Johnson, Clark Harris, Russell Cornelius Harold Clark.

Mrs. Beadle Witness Accident

While returning to Lakeside from San Diego, Tuesday of this week, Mrs. Florence Beadle witnessed an accident which occurred on Grossmont Hill, of which she was connected with in a very indirect way.

The accident occurred when Mrs. Mary E. Wheeler traveling in the direction of San Diego attempted to pass an automobile filled with Grossmont High School boys. Seeing an automombile driven by Mrs Florence Beadle approaching from the opposite direction Mrs. Wheeler hurriedly pulled in front of the automobile which she had just passed; but misjudged her distance and hooked the right fender wth the front bumper of the automobile in the rear, causing the car behind to turn over on its side along the soft dirt embankment.

Mrs. Beadle, anticipating what might happen if she continued along the hghway, hastily pulled off to the sideof the road and stopped; thus avoiding what might have been a head on collision.

The occupants of the overturned car were Alvin Petrie, nephew of the Petrie Feed Store in La Mesa; Dick Bailey, Bill Schelte, Le Roy Rockwell all of Lemon Grove; Forrest Murrey, Lester Kotter of Spring Valley and Howard Bedsworth of Lemon Grove who received deep gashes on his leg and was rushed to La Wesa for medical treatment.

CALIFORNIA VOTERS SHOULD STUDY PETITION

BY RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

The time-worn adage—"All that glitters is not gold!"—certainly applies, with increasing frequency, to the dazzling proposals which are dangled before California voters.

Gilt wrappers have become the custom, rather than the colorful exception, and attempts to hoodwink the taxpayer have become more flagrant with the years.

Petitions are being circulated this year, for example, to submit a proposed $3500 homestead tax exemption act to the voters.

On its face the proposal might seem attractive, at least to the small property owner. But under the gilt, there's a badly tarnished surface.

If this scheme received voter approval, according to an anaylsis by the California Real Estate Association, the local tax base would be narrowed by a least one-third.

The number of individual tax payers would be reduced by at least one-half.

And on the backs of the remainder, already overburdened by heavy local and district tax levies, would fall the entire brunt of local taxation!

The fallacy of such glittering proposals, of course, is that they are so unfair and discriminatory as to be unworkable.

If half of all California taxpayers were suddenly relieved of taxation, most of the remaining half would soon collapse under the extortionate load that would inevitably result.

And the little taxpayers—the farmer and the home owner, who might expect (if they failed to dig below the surface) to profit by such tax-exemptions—would soon find themselves packing nearly the entire burden, due to the financial collapse of businesses and industries and substantial taxpaying groups which had been taxed out of existence.

When taxes exceed capacity to pay, they simply aren't paid. And the outcome is chaos!

There will be many tax exemption schemes on the ballot, some designed to shift the burden to land—others, ostensibly designed to reduce land taxes.

They are equally bad, for they are equally impractical and impossible.

There has been an alarming tendency, in recent years, to increase the amount of properties exempt from taxation, with the result that farmers and other common property taxpayers, in many instances, are carrying the other fellow's burden.

Consider the record as submitted by the California Taxpayers Association:

At the present time, tax exempt properties — both government-owned and privately owned—total $1,367,312,000, or one sixth of the total assessed value of all property in the state.

Property assessed for a total of

One of the snappiest, and fast moving mystery comedies ever to be given in Lakeside School Auditorium, under the supervision of Mrs. Amorita Turnball.

The play—'One Mad Night" is filled with incidents that will have the audience near the state of collapse one minute and setting on the edge of their seats the next.

Nelson, Douglas McClain, Clarice Andrew, Ruby Nelson, and Messrs. Elmer Walker, Fred Morton, Leslie Kephart, Lloyd Foster, and Hardigan Clower

So be on hand to witness the play you have read so much about —One Mad Night.

Dog Poisoners Still Active in Lakeside

Mrs. John E. Leng and family were grieved Tuesday night when one of their dogs was found dead near their home.

The animal which was partially crippled had apparently tried to reach home, after eating the poison and had not been able to make it.

Two weeks ago in the Farmer a notice appeared telling of the poisoning of various animals which might be either accidental or deliberate, but with this latest poisoning and the evidence of poision found in eggs and meat in Lakeside, there is no doubt in mind but that this poision has been set out for someone who has no love or sympathy for animals, or thought of their fellowman.

It is intentional and the person when caught deserves no spark of mercy, but should be punished severely.

Immediate action should be taken to apprehend the person that is responsible for these outrages acts.

Mrs. L. J. Clevenger is calling a meeting of the Flower Show committee next Thursday afternoon at two p. m. to make plans for the flower show to be given by the Lakeside Women's Club April 28.

LAKESIDERS SIGN HIGH-WAY SAFETY PETITIONS

Thousands of signatures including a large number from Lakeside and vicinity already have been placed on initiative petitions to bring to a vote next November a proposed constitutional amendment reorganizing administration of State highway and safety affairs.

This statement is issued by the Automobile Club of Southern California recently, also announced endorsement of the measure by the executive council of the State Federation of Labor. The southern club and the California State Automobile Association in the north are sponsoring the proposed change.

"Labor is happy to endorse this initiative measure modernizing highway affairs. It should provide the most outstanding highway administration plan in the nation," declared C. J. Haggerty, president of the state federation, at a recent meeting at Santa Barbara where the measure was approved.

This endorsement of the federation executive council means that labor councils, building trades councils and other central bodies affilated with the California Federation of Labor also will strongly support the plan, said the automobile club statement.

The motor club points out that the present highway commission is a non-salaried, part time body, yet it has the duty of allocating funds, locating routes, and generally administering construction and maintenance of a system of more than 14,000 miles of State highways involving an annual expenditure of nearly $40,000,000.

"Since many complex problems have arisen because of part-time administration and division of authority in highway and safety matters," notes the organization, "the amendment is proposed to establish a highway and traffic safety commission on a full-time, salaried basis, under which all State functions relating to highways and traffic safety would be consolidated."

The measure provides that the five commissioners shall be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate for ten-year terms, that they can be removed only by a two-thirds vote of the Senate, and that not more than three shall be of the same political party.

The plan would give the commission authority over all State highway activities, issuance of operators' and chauffeurs' licenses, and over the California Highway Patrol.

MRS. MALLORY RECEIVES LETTER FROM OLONGAPO

Two letters received recently by Mrs. E. L. Mallory from Mr. C. A. Ver Plank at Olongapo seemed a bit out of the ordinary so thounght our readers might enjoy reading them.

The first letter appearing in this weeks issue is dated January 29th and reads as follows.

The climate in Olongapo is a welcomed change from the Cavite Navy yard. The cool breezes that come sweeping down from off the high mountains that surround the Bay, make this an ideal base for the ships to operate. Swimming parties have been leaving the ship regularly for Maquinaya Bay, which is just a short distance from where the ships are anchored. There is a splendid beach and the entire bathing area has been carefully protected from the invading sharks and barracuda.

Speaking of sharks, the much dreaded demons of the sea, an eight footer was caught off the fantail of the Black Hawk a few days ago. After many anxious moments of grim struggling and battling, the monster was finally brought on board, and immediately the butchers knives and cleavers came into play removing the teeth and backbone, the much coveted shark trophies.

What remains after that is given o the natives, with the result that many delicious shark steaks were consumed by the native villagers that night after the catch. To the best of my knowledge, I have never feasted on this native tropical delicacy, but according to various and sundry reports, a well prepared plank steak of sharks meat, will hold its own at most anyone's table. Para phasing the old quotation "Tasting is believing"—but for one prefer to take some person's word for it.

More than a month ago our Executive Officer, Lieut. Comdr., M. Holton. U. S. N. was transferred to the Naval Hospital, Canal for treatment. Recently Lt. Comdr., Jerome L. Alen, U. S. who for the last six months been Captain of the Yard, Commanding, Naval Station Olongapo was ordered to the Black Hawk our new Executive Officer. We extend to Commander Allen a cial welcome, and hope that his duty will be a most happy one also understand that Lieut. Holton has been ordered home the U. S. S. WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE'S

To Ride the River With

COPYRIGHT WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE—WNU SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Ruth Chiswick of L C ranch, obsessed by fear of danger to her outspoken father, Lee, from a band of lawless rustlers headed by Sherm Howard, decides to save him by eloping with young Lou Howard, Sherm's son, and comes to the town of Tail Holt to meet him. While in Yell Sanger's store, a crook-nosed stranger enters, sizes up the situation, and when a drunken cowboy, Jim Pender, rides in and starts shooting, protects Ruth, while Lou Howard hides. Disgusted with Lou's cowardice, Ruth calls off the elopement, and sends the stranger for her father at the gambling house across the street. There the stranger, calling himself Jeff Gray, meets Morgan Norris, a killer, Curly Connor, Kansas, Mile High, Sid Hunt, and other rustlers, and Sherm Howard. Lee Chiswick enters, with his foreman, Dan Brand, and tells Sherm Howard of his orders to shoot rustlers at sight. Jeff Gray returns to Ruth and coldly reassures her of her father's safety. At supper, Ruth introduces Jeff to her father and Brand, and in Sanger's store later she speaks cordially to Curly Connor. Coming out of the store, they are greeted by sudden gunplay, Lee is wounded, and Jeff Gray appears with a smoking revolver. Two days later, Ruth tells her father of her projected elopement and her disillusionment. Later, Ruth meets Jeff Gray, whom she thinks tried to kill her father. When he tries to hold her bridle, Ruth accidentally presses the trigger of her gun, and wounds Jeff. She takes him to Pat Sorley's camp.

"Must I?" He grinned at her with cheerful effrontery.

"Of course you must." Ruth almost stamped her foot in exasperation. "If you didn't do it, who did?"

"I wouldn't know."

She took that up triumphantly. "Neither you nor anybody else."

"But I could guess."

"Who, then?" she demanded.

"If I ever mention it, probably it will be to the gent himself," he said softly.

"I thought so."

Gray turned to the line-rider. "Two shots were fired before Mr. Chiswick's friends took a hand. I fired the second. Point is, who cut loose with the first?"

"If you weren't in it, why did you shoot at all?" Ruth asked.

"I've asked myself that two-three times since," he replied suavely. "Plumb dumb of me. For 20 years I've been minding my own business exclusive, yet soon as I hit Tail Holt I butt into yours, not only once but se-ve-real times. I wouldn't know why, unless I've gone loco."

"You beat around the bush without telling anything," the girl charged.

"By your own story you shot at the boss onct," Sorley snapped. "Right after you'd eaten supper with him and Miss Ruth."

"Who said that was my story? I don't recollect ever telling it."

Ruth stared at the hardy scamp, her eyes dilating with excitement. "You mean you didn't fire at Father at all, but at the villain who was trying to kill him?"

"Go to the head of the class, Miss," Gray said, with a grim ironic smile. "It's the best story I could think up after three or four days, so I thought I would come back and try it on Lee Chiswick. 'Course you're smart as a whip, and I wouldn't expect to put it across with you."

A queer lift of joy sang in the girl's blood. She knew this was the truth. It explained everything. He had fired on the assassin and run forward to protect her father from any others who might turn their guns on him while he was defenseless. Naturally his purpose had been mistaken. The fire of Dan and Curly had driven him away. He had no time to explain. If he stayed, he would be shot down. There was no chance to show his weapon, with only one chamber empty. Now he had no evidence to back his story.

"Why didn't you tell me before?" she cried.

"You and yore friends are so handy with guns I never get time to make oration," he said dryly.

Distress flooded her. She had shot him, after he had perhaps saved the life of her father.

"His story don't look good to me," Sorley said coldly. "I would say he was runnin' a whizzer on us, Miss Ruth."

"No. It's true." The girl drew a deep breath of relief. "I'm awf'ly glad it is."

The wounded man looked at her. "What difference does it make to you whether I or someone else shot him?" he asked.

Her eyes met his, the color on her cheeks hot beneath them. "I don't like you a bit. I think you are hateful. But I didn't believe you were a low scoundrel until—what I saw at Tail Holt. Now I know you're not that kind of man. You saved my father's life. I don't know how to thank you . . . or to tell you how sorry I am that I hurt you."

"So now it's all right," he jeered, "and I ought to tell you how grateful I am for the lead pill you gave me."

"I've told you I'm sorry, and that I didn't mean to do it," Ruth said. "That's fine. You just pointed a popgun at me to make Fourth-of-July fireworks. I'm lucky you got only a leg to puncture."

Ruth felt anger stir in her, but she kept it down. "If there's anything I can do for you while you're here—anything I can bring you," she said in a carefully even voice.

"I'm going to see you again, am I? How nice! There are several things you can bring me. One is some tobacco. I'd like two-three books, and the latest newspaper you have. Also, bring Lee Chiswick. I want a powwow with him."

"I'll send the books with my father," she said.

Lee Chiswick broke into his daughter's story excitedly.

"He's hanging around waiting for a chance to dry-gulch me."

Ruth shook her head. "I thought so at first. I don't now. Listen."

"Lucky the wolf didn't do you a meanness when he had a chance." The strong jaw of the cattleman set. "I'll have him rounded up and rubbed out before he's 24 hours older."

"You won't need to round him up. I can tell you where he is. My story isn't finished. Do you want to hear it or not?"

"Where is he?" demanded Chiswick.

"He's at the rimrock line-camp, with a bullet-hole in his leg."

"Did Pat get him?"

"No. I did."

"You what?"

"I shot him."

Her father stared at her with blank astonishment. "Good God, girl! What do you mean?"

"I tried to pass him. He caught at the bridle rein. I don't know why. Perhaps he couldn't get out of the way and didn't want Blue Chip to trample him down. Somehow my gun went off and hit him. I didn't want him to die before he could get help, so I took him to the camp."

"What name shall I say?" asked Reynolds.

"Why didn't you come and get some of us?" he asked, his voice sharp with anxiety. "He might have shot you down on the way."

"I was as safe with him as I would be with you, Father," she said. "He isn't that kind of man. I don't like him. He's . . . insulting. But he is not the kind of ruffian who would hurt a woman or would take advantage of a man in a fight. He didn't shoot you. Someone else did."

"That's crazy talk!" Lee shouted. "We saw him do it."

"We thought we saw him do it," she corrected. "But we didn't. He saw someone fire at you and shot at the man. Then he ran forward to protect you, and we all thought he was the killer. Think it over, Father. From the position you were standing the bullet that creased you must have been fired in the alley, but this Gray came another direction."

"Got it all figured out, haven't you—with his help?" Lee said angrily.

"If he had been the man, would he have run forward into the nest of us? It isn't reasonable. He was taken by surprise when Dan began shooting at him. I could see that. To save his life he had to get out."

"What's he doing here, then?"

"He wants to see you. I don't know what about. He insisted on my bringing you."

"He'll see me, all right," the cattleman said, his voice harsh and grim.

"My opinion is that he saved your life, after he had already taken care of me when a crazy man was on the shoot. Then I put a bullet in him, and now you want to finish him." Ruth spoke with sharp bitterness.

"I'll listen to him," Lee told her. "I'll hear what he has got to say. Maybe you are right, but I don't believe it. If he comes clean and tells me what he is doing here—and if what he says satisfies me—he'll be as safe with me as in God's pocket. I'll have him brought to the house and we'll take care of him here. But he can't pull the wool over my eyes. He has got to be straight goods."

"That's fair," Ruth agreed. "I don't know anything about who he is. Maybe he's an outlaw on the dodge. He's as hard as iron and he may have gone bad. But there's something clean about him. He wouldn't shoot a man in the back. I'd stake everything I had on that."

Chiswick nodded. "I would have said that myself, and I'm not often wrong about a man. When he ran at me with his gun smoking, I was sure surprised. Maybe you're right, daughter. He'll get a chance to tell his story."

"May I ride up to the line-camp with you?" Ruth asked.

"No!" he exploded, and slammed a fist down on the breakfast-table to emphasize his decision. "You can't go with me. What's the matter with you, girl? You head for trouble like a thirsty steer for water. First, you run off with a no-'count scalawag not worth a hill of beans, then you shoot another and tote him to hospital without asking me a by-your-leave. That's no way for a lady to do. No wonder folks think you're a wild young hellion. You are grown up now. You got to learn to act genteel."

"Would it be unladylike for me to go down with you and take some fried chicken and biscuits to a sick man?" she wanted to know.

"You fix up this fried chicken and I'll take it down," Lee said firmly. "I aim to be reasonable, but I'm through letting you behave so crazy."

Ruth gave up. She packed the tobacco, the books, and the food. For Pat she put in a corn-cob pipe to replace the broken clay one.

Knowing her father's impulsive nature, she was full of misgivings.

Over his shoulder, as he started, he called back a word of reassurance. "Don't you worry, daughter. I'm not going off half-cocked. If this Gray can show me he's not a yellow coyote, I'll not harm him."

In a natural meadow half a mile from the house he stopped to give Dan Brand instructions about the drive of yearlings sold to Broderick. This done, he told his son Frank and the foreman what he had just learned from Ruth.

Frank asked to ride with him to Sorley's camp.

The Chiswicks rode up to the rimrock and skirted the edge of it until they reached a break. Through this they climbed to the lip of the park where the line-camp lay.

From the chimney of the cabin a thin trickle of smoke drifted.

"Pat is probably line-riding and has left this fellow alone," Frank said.

As they drew closer, Lee hulloed the house. From the boulder field back of it an echo came back to them. No other answer sounded. A second time he shouted, still without response.

"Get your gun out, boy," he ordered grimly. "I don't like this."

He swung from the saddle and drew the rifle attached to it. Frank dismounted hurriedly, his horse between him and the house.

"I sure don't want to get blasted out of my saddle," he said.

The two men worked toward the cabin, using their horses to screen them as much as possible from any sharpshooters who might be in the building or among the rocks above. Nobody stirred except themselves. Frank felt a strange prickling sensation run up and down his spine. Any moment there might come a crash of guns.

Lee maneuvered close to the door, then made a bolt for it. His son was inside scarce a second later.

The cabin was empty.

"Where's the fellow gone?" Lee asked.

"I reckon he wasn't as bad hurt as he was making out," Frank said.

"What's this?"

Lee picked a piece of wrapping-paper from the table. He read aloud something that had been scrawled on it with a pencil. "Much obliged, Doc, for fixing my leg. See you later maybe."

Jeff Gray rode into Tail Holt two days after leaving the rimrock line-camp. His broad shoulders sagged with weariness. The eyes of the man were sunken. The lean face was haggard and unshaven. At the Alamo corral he dismounted stiffly.

The owner of the place, Jim Reynolds, squinted an unspoken question at him from under slanted eyebrows. There was an arresting quality about Gray that held attention. The fatigue, the stains of travel, did not conceal his dominant force. He unsaddled the sweat-streaked roan gelding with a competent economy of motion. When he moved, a pantherish ripple ran wavelike through his well-packed muscles.

"Yore bronc some gaunted," Reynolds said.

"Some," Gray agreed.

He watered and fed the animal himself. Reynolds watched him, observing that he knew how to treat a hot, tired horse. The corral-owner wondered who this stranger was.

"I'll put up at Ma Presnall's if she has room for me," Gray said. "Could you send word to Sherm Howard that I'm there and want to see him?"

"What name shall I say?" asked Reynolds.

"Jeff Gray. I'm obliged, sir."

Gray limped up the street toward the boarding-house.

Ma Presnall had her muscular arms bare to the elbows. There was a splash of flour on one temple. She had been baking. Her face was leathery and wrinkled, the challenge of her washed-out eyes direct and hard. For twenty years she had lived in frontier camps and held her own.

He could have a room and board, she said, for a dollar a day or five dollars a week. Strangers paid in advance. A five-dollar bill passed from Gray to her and she led him to his room.

After washing the caked dust from face and hands, he lay down on the bed. The wound in his leg was throbbing. For the better part of sixty hours he had been in the saddle and he was almost worn out. When the opportunity came he would bathe and dress the hurt. Just now he had not time. He was expecting a visit from Sherman Howard and perhaps from others. It was unfortunate that his entry into Tail Holt had been so melodramatic. Probably he would have to light out again, if they gave him a chance to go.

With his pocket-knife he ripped open the lining of his vest and drew out a folded paper. He expected to need it shortly. The paper was a printed poster offering a reward of $2,000 for the capture of Clint Doke, the leader of a band of outlaws who had held up and robbed the Texas and Southern Flyer. A description of the desperado was given. With it was a picture taken from a cut. The face that looked back from the poster at Jeff Gray was his own.

Through the door Ma Presnall called information. "Some gents to see you."

"Who are they?" Gray asked, putting the paper in his vest pocket.

"Sherm Howard, Curly Connor and Morg Norris."

There was a barely perceptible pause before Gray said, "Ask them to come up, Mrs. Presnall, if you will."

Cross Wheat and Couch Grass to Halt Shifting of the Farm Soil in Canada

In some parts of Canada a serious problem has been confronting farmers for many years now—one with which no English farmer is likely to be faced. Their farms won't stay put.

On the wide prairies of North America acres of loose soil shift each year, through the action of wind and rain. Up to the present there has been nothing to prevent it. Farmers simply had to sit and watch the fertile top soil wash away in the heavy rains of the spring and autumn, and blow away when, in the summer, the burning sun dried it up into fine dust.

Thus, every year, says a writer in London Answers Magazine, the land was impoverished, and no amount of manuring or careful cultivation on the part of the farmer served him in what seemed to be a hopeless battle against Nature.

In the last year or two the trouble has been intensified, and considerable tracts of land have been laid waste.

But the scientist can sometimes find a weapon which will turn defeat into victory, and the Biological Institute of Svaloef, South Sweden, hopes before long to put a stop to this constant disappearance of valuable soil.

They are crossing wheat with the farmers' old enemy, couch grass, and they have every reason to hope that the result will be a useful crop of grain, provided by a plant whose clinging roots will bind together the shifting soil.

Canadian farmers will have much to thank the scientists for when they plant this grain, and another on which the scientists are working now.

The latter is a cross between wheat and rye, which, it is hoped, will be capable of withstanding the bitter cold of the long northern winters, and of producing a useful crop at the same time. The Canadian farmers' continued prosperity depends on some such type of grain.

At present the yield is too small to be useful, but in the future, no doubt, it will be a standard crop.

Very Smart New Fashions

A HOUSE dress with long slender lines, a dress and apron for little girls, and a popular bolero frock for slim young figures! You will certainly want one of these, and more likely will want all three. With each pattern, you receive a complete and detailed sew chart specially planned to help beginners, so that the making will be easy, and save you money besides.

Popular Bolero Frock.

Make it up of silk crepe or a pretty print, and see how expensive, how flattering, it looks! The short bolero and wide shoulders make the slim lines of the frock even more graceful. Notice how cleverly the dress is shirred into the front panel at the waistline. This is one of the prettiest afternoon dresses you could choose for this spring.

Dress and Apron for Tots.

Your little girl will be so proud of having this heart-shaped apron to put on over her best dress when she plays house! And the puff-sleeved, square-necked dress is adorable. You can make the two of them in no time. For the dress, choose dimity or organdy for dress-up; gingham or percale for every day. Dimity or lawn for the apron.

House Dress for Large Figures.

This is such a becoming, comfortable, good-looking dress to work in, round the house. The lines are so straight and unhampering, and pleats in the short sleeves give plenty of room for stretching and reaching. It takes inches off the figure, too. Make it up in seersucker, gingham, linen or percale printed in small designs.

The Patterns.

1478 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 6⅝ yards of 39-inch material.

1468 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 years. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 35-inch material for the dress, with 6 yards of narrow ribbon to trim and 1 yard wider ribbon for the belt. Size 4 requires ⅞ yard of 35-inch material for the apron, and 2½ yards of ruffling.

1476 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5 yards of 35-inch material without nap.

Strange Facts

Curtain of Fire Stops Radio

A CURTAIN of fire is one of nature's great electrical mysteries. In northern latitudes at certain times beams and flashes of dazzling brilliance play across the sky. Sometimes it is like giant searchlights from beyond the rim of the world. The discharge of light is 50 to 100 miles above the earth. With it comes a noise, a low crackling sound like the rustle of silk, believed to be made by the aurora borealis.

On January 25, 1938, the people of London came running from their houses believing that the whole city was afire. All over Europe fire engines rushed to put out non-existent fires. Even Windsor castle was thought to be burning to the ground as the fire department raced to the scene. On that night from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. the most brilliant display of aurora borealis in 50 years was seen over a wide area of northern Europe, extending even to Italy and Portugal. Between New York and Europe short-wave radio went dead.

The cause of nature's most beautiful, mysterious and at times most terrifying phenomenon is unknown. Scientists believe the rays are due to discharges of electricity in the upper atmosphere, and are in some unknown way related to sun spots. Sun spots are dark spots on the face of the sun, seen only through a telescope. They look like cavities and from the rim of these cavities rise whirling flames. Some scientists believe the sun spots are giant fiery whirlpools that move across the face of the sun. They seem to cause magnetic storms which in turn disrupt radio communication and also, some scientists believe, affect the weather on the earth.

"'Cause," replied the man harshly, "Ah been in jail fo' a murder Ah committed. Now, whu was you stoppin' me fo'?"

Sambo gulped. He wet his lips. "De reason Ah stopped you," he returned nervously, "was jes' to tell you not to worry about payin' dat money."

B. A. SWEET VIEWS COMING CAMPAIGN

Believing that it will be of interest to your readers. I am setting forth some of the problems that all the people in the back country will be confronted with during the next few months when the campaign for county offcials gets under way.

It is very evident that we are going to have several candidates that can be logically termed "country men" offering their services to the people of the 5th Supervisorial district. Each of the candidates will have friends and will receive many votes from the people that can be classed as "country minded". This in a measure splits the country vote and there is grave possibility of a candidate who could be classed as a city man slipping into office. This is how it is planned.

The 5th Supervisorial district comprises all of north and northeastern San Diego county, also the City of La Mesa, La Mesa Heights, Kensington Park, Talmadge Park, Kensington Heights, Pacific Beach, Mission Beach, La Jolla, and several precincts in the city of San Diego. Within these named districts is registered approximaetly 60 per cent of the entire voting public in the 5th Supervisorial district, and I believe all of these districts can be more or less classed as metropolitan areas, consequently will produce metropolitan votes.

There is now existing a well financed oranization ready to sponsor a candidate from this metropolitan area and run him on one platform only—gas tax diversion—50 per cent for the city of San Diego and 50 per cent for the country. Their belief is that the metropolitan area can elect a County Supervisor without help from the country districts. The whole game is to split the country vote and hold the city vote together. This is a very acute situation that confronts us.

I am presenting these facts to you, not in the interest of any candidate but for your serious consideration. Could the people of northern San Diego county get proper representation on the Board of Supervisors under the conditions aforementioned?

For the calendar year of 1937, Savings Bond sales were reported to be 34 per cent greater than in 1936.

A record of one day's sales was set on Jan. 10, of this year, when $10,029,775, maturity value, of these Bonds were reported sold on this single day.

The $100 bond unit has proven to be the most popular denomination, followed by the $25 unit, with the $50 unit next. The $1000 unit ranks fourth, with the $500 one at the end of the list.

The majority of Bond owners are small investors who are buying Bonds out of income. There individual purchasers represent 85 per cent of the amount of Bonds sold. Of the remaining 9 per cent was purchased by banks and trust companies, 3 per cent by corporations, and 3 per cent by associations.

Chicago is the reported leader of the nation in its Bond sales, with New York City a close second. Los Angeles, California, ranks seventh.

In our own state, Los Angeles ranks first San Francisco second, and San Diego third.

Weekly reports from Postmasters, and the Federal Reserve Banks, have made this comprehensive report possible, this being the first year that these tabulations have been kept.

"CRUCIFIXION" TO BE PRESENTED AT BOSTONIA CHURCH

On the nght of April 13 at St. John's Episcopal Church will be held a sacred musical event of unusual importance. It will combine a rendition of Stainer's ramed cantata "The Crucifixion" with an Orgatron recital.

Jamie Erickson, famous organist composer will be presented preceeding the choral work at the console of the new electric Everett Orgatron. Erickson has recently been heard in several outstandng programs at La Mesa and vicinity. His instrument, the Orgatron, is an electro tone organ which looks, sounds and is played like a pipe organ and has all the tonal beautv and smoothness of action of a great cathredal instrument yet is portable and wll be installed for this special concert.

The tenor soloist for the cantata will be Gordon Barstow, well known San Diego singer. For the bass role, Percy Riker, local resident, now appearing in important musical events in and around Los Angeles has been engaged. The chorus choir has been augmented for the sacred presentation. Marjorie Swoboda will accompany "The Crucifixion" at the console of the Everett Orgatron. Harold Bacon is the choir director.

This promises to be one of the outstanding presentations of Holy Week and Easter tide and all are urged to attend. There will be no charge for admission.

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—For a government to rush into debt is a grand thing for all its citizens. For an individual to rush into debt is a terrible thing for all his dependents—though a good thing for his country.

Boiled down, that is the essence of the economic theory of a good many of President Roosevelt's advisers, if not of the President himself. It is shared by no less, for example, than Marriner Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the federal reserve system.

This sounds like a sarcastic criticism, especially to many of the old-fashioned fools who were brought up, whether they followed the teachings or not, on a "willful waste brings woeful want," and a "save the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves" philosophy. Actually it is as simple a statement of the theory as the writer has heard.

With plentiful government spending, especially if the money is raised by borrowing instead of by taxation, employment is encouraged; buying is encouraged; prices tend to rise; everybody has a job; and everybody, except the budget balancing theorists, is happy.

Example is made of Great Britain, which has never paid off the debts incurred in the Napoleonic wars, much less any of her enormous borrowings since. At various stages during the last two hundred years economists have worried about this debt. Actually, it is contended, Britain is just as well off now as at any time during the process, and her present ills are not due to her debt.

Of course, during this two hundred-year period described—for it goes way back of Napoleon—something has happened, which the economists advocating the bigger debt and bigger government spending theory do not mention. There has been a gradual shrinkage of the value of the pound sterling. But then, on the other hand, Britain is often cited as the only important country in the world which has never had a real inflation. Not an inflation crisis, to be sure, but her currency has gradually depreciated. Which is another way of saying that the people who saved their money kept losing a considerable fraction of it.

Evil of Saving

But there is a simpler illustration of the "evil" of saving. Let us imagine that everybody in the United States was gainfully employed, and every one saved so much of his earnings that the interest on his earnings would support him after 20 years.

In a very short period, 40 years at the outside, assuming no gambling element which would lead to losses, every family in the country would be able to live on its income. Theoretically, no one would have to work at all. Men and women could just spend their income on what they wanted, perhaps even save part of it.

Carrying this absurdity to extremes to make it clear, we would then be a nation of idlers, living on our incomes. But who would provide the food and clothing and automobiles and radios for our population?

To make the point still clearer, imagine a tariff wall around the United States so high that there would be no international trade. What would happen? Obviously demand being very high, and supply being very low, prices would soar. What would amount to a capital levy would thus be occasioned, and the accumulated savings would be wiped out. Everybody would go back to work again.

Now assume a little bit of this instead of a wholesale dose, and you have a depression. Reverse it, with everybody spending his head off, and you have a boom. In a nutshell, that is the theory, with the addition that if the individual doesn't spend, the government must.

Guffey Starts Something

Senator Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania certainly started something when he named the issue on which he intended to support Thomas Kennedy and oppose Charles Alvin Jones in the Democratic gubernatorial primary in the Keystone state.

Guffey is supporting Kennedy for three reasons. One is that Kennedy has always regarded Guffey as his leader—has followed him in every important fight for many years. A second is that in supporting Kennedy, Guffey continues his alliance with John L. Lewis, who is Kennedy's real chief, for years in labor activities, now in politics as well. And a third is that Jones, who won the regular Democratic organization support, has always been a thorn in Guffey's side.

Guffey places it all on the count that Jones was against Roosevelt for the nomination in 1932. In short it was "Against Roosevelt Before Chicago," while Kennedy and Guffey were fighting loyally for Roosevelt. That is a mighty interesting charge. It hits a lot of people. It hits Jack Garner, who is now against Roosevelt with some very important delegates. It hits the entire Maryland Democracy, which was enthusiastic for Albert C. Ritchie. It hits the majority leaders in 1932 of the Democratic party in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey. It reaches out into California and hits Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, who was for Garner. It hits more than three-quarters of the important Democratic leaders in Ohio, and plenty in Indiana.

Idea Is Not New

There is nothing new about the idea of discrimination against Democrats who do not belong to the "For Roosevelt Before Chicago" club. But up until now the only point has been in patronage. Guffey would magnify this discrimination to apply to running for elective office. It would bar from any important role in politics everyone who was not actively fighting for the nomination of Roosevelt in the period immediately preceding June, 1932.

This is a new sort of political doctrine. It runs counter to the oft-stated maxim of Will H. Hays that "assimilation, not elimination" is what a party needs.

And there is just enough truth in Guffey's new doctrine, regardless of his own sincerity in stating it, to cause trouble. For there is not a Democratic senator or governor or member of the legislature who does not suspect that in any contest between an old Roosevelt friend and an old Roosevelt opponent, the President would be inclined to support the friend. That is human. It has always been.

The importance of it now is that never before has the titular head of a party, occupying the White House, had so much power to affect results in state primaries and conventions of his party.

Putting the two Guffey doctrines together would look very much as though John L. Lewis' favorite senator was digging a pit for Roosevelt to fall into.

All Boards "Wooden"

General Goethals, of Panama canal fame, was wont to remark, toward the end of his life, that "all boards are long, narrow and wooden." This opinion grew out of his experience with the United States shipping board, which attempted to build ships during the World war emergency. It had nothing to do with his experience at the canal. In fact, it was the contrast between his helpless bickering in the shipping board, and the czarism he practiced, thanks to Theodore Roosevelt, at the canal job, that brought forth his derogatory comment on boards.

All of which applies to the present Tennessee Valley authority (better known by its initials, TVA,) controversy. The real trouble considering solely its administrative mess, is the fact that it is run by a three-man board.

Washington observers have been racking their brains during the last few weeks to discover a single case of any government board, set up with a business type of function, as distinguished from a judicial type of function, which has not been ruined by personal conflicts between the board members.

The TVA is the outstanding present illustration of failure. The United States shipping board, with its interminable quarreling between members on wooden ships versus steel, etc., is the one best remembered.

On the contrary the ICC is an outstanding case of a successful government board, but its function is almost entirely judicial.

But in Business

Why, it is asked, should corporations be run successfully by boards, but governmental agencies apparently always come to grief. The answer, observers here figure out, is that business corporations are actually almost always dominated by one man. The division in power among the board members is theoretical, not practical. In a politically appointed board one member is just as powerful, so far as the operation of the board is concerned, as another. In business it is almost never that way.

For instance, the president of a corporation is always a member of the board. In some instances he is the dominating figure. He runs the company. If he runs it successfully the board of directors is just a set of rubber stamps. They approve his policies. The test of his power is the success of the corporation.

But the division of the corporation into three or more parts, with one member of the board supreme in each pigeonhole, would be highly unlikely in a corporation designed for profit. In a corporation such natural divisions of work are made, but they are usually confided to vice presidents, or other executives, each of whom is under the president.

Sometimes the president is really just an executive, all the planning and policy coming from the board, but in most of those cases the board man.

When Poles Prepared for Invasion

Well equipped, well-drilled, these steel-helmeted Polish troops were photographed at Bydyosoz recently as they marched past their commander in chief, General Smigly-Rydz. Soon afterward they were rushed to the Lithanian border to enforce a Polish ultimatum. When Lithuania capitulated the world breathed easier as a threat of war was removed.

New Watermelon Developed

D. R. Porter, associate professor of truck crops at the College of Agriculture, has announced the release of a new watermelon variety, known as Klondike R. 7. The new variety has been developed to resist the disastrous wilt (Fusarium niveum) which has destroyed so many fields of flourishing vines in a few hours' times, and rendered whole sections of the State unprofitable for watermelon raising. The new variety is the result of a cross of Iowa Belle with Klondike, and continued propagation of resistant stock with complete control of self pollination. The improved Klondike R. 7 retains the desirable Klondike qualities of solid deep red flesh, high sugar content, agreeable texture, and relatively thin rind. Klondike R. 7 has given yields on wilt infested fields of better than one carload per acre.

Flood Rehabilitation Project

A $237,497 WPA emergency flood damage repair project will be started shortly in Tulare County. To this county-sponsored project, the five road districts will contribute 16 per cent of the cost, the Federal government contributing 84 per cent, largely in the form of materials and equipment rental. The road district will provide the equipment.

Livestock Income $70,900,000

The livestock industry brought an income of $70,900,000 to the State last year, the highest since 1929 and an increase of 14 per cent over 1936. The estimate covered meat animals and wool marketed, and is figured by the California State Department of Agriculture. The farm value of livestock at the year's end was placed at $159,653,000, a decline from $164,555,000 in the year, but more than double the 1933 value.

Asparagus Men Ask Advisory Board

Leading asparagus growers and canners of the State have recommended an advisory board to cooperate with the State department of agriculture in the administration of the 1938 marketing order. Canners said because of the rainy weather this season the packing of asparagus probably will not be started until around April 15th. The packing season is expected to close around June 30th. The proposed 1938 order is similar to that of 1937. Only Grade 1 asparagus will be packed, the balance going into the fresh asparagus market.

Farm Group Hits A.A.A. Definition

A resolution protesting the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's definition of "tilled" acres as applied to the cotton phase of the 1938 act was adopted by Farm Bureau representatives from cotton growing counties of California. The definition to which the Farm Bureau objects excludes wheat, orchards and vineyards from the "tilled" category and establishes 1938 as a basis. The Farm Bureau wants the "tilled" acreage defined as the maximum acreage under cultivation during any one of the last three years.

Farm Income Lower

Farmers of the eleven far western states had an aggregate January cash income of $73,244,000. This is the estimate of the federal bureau of agricultural economics. It compares with $82,480,000 in January last year and $63,020,000 in January, 1936. The cash returns were about 11 per cent under last year, but 16 per cent higher than two years ago. Of the eleven states, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Wyoming had higher farm incomes than last year. California, Washington, Utah, New Mexico, Colorado, Idaho and Montana had lower cash intake.

Kern Cattle Testing Speeded

Hoping to complete their work by May 1 so that Kern County may join the ranks of California modified accredited tuberculosis-free cattle raising counties, four veterinarians are testing beef cattle for tuberculin infection. Work of testing all dairy cattle in Kern County has been completed, sixteen testers having been engaged in the work since February 1. The testing of beef cattle is expected to be easier as the percentage of infection is less. For a county to receive modified accreditation as free of tuberculosis, it must be demonstrated that less than half of one per cent of all the cattle in the county are reactors to the tuberculin test. The State now has twenty-six accredited counties.

Oak root fungus, a white thread like, fan-shaped growth between the bark and wood of the root on citrus trees, may be endangering Southland groves washed by recent floods, it was announced by A. G. Salter, assistant farm adviser for Los Angeles County. Growers who have debris deposited in their orchards are urged to inspect for the fungus, inasmuch as past floods have been known to bring the growth by washing in diseased roots which may be turned under unknowingly.

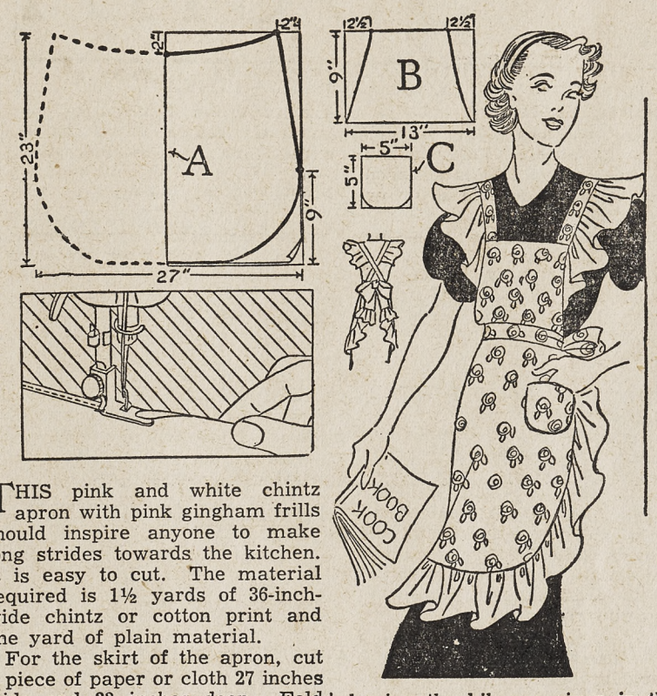
The Curse of Progress

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears



THIS pink and white chintz apron with pink gingham frills should inspire anyone to make long strides towards the kitchen. It is easy to cut. The material required is 1½ yards of 36-inch-wide chintz or cotton print and one yard of plain material.

For the skirt of the apron, cut a piece of paper or cloth 27 inches wide and 23 inches deep. Fold this lengthwise through the center, as at A, then measure down from the top of the fold and in from the corners the distances indicated in the diagram and mark the dots. Using the dots as a guide, mark the outline of the apron skirt as you see it in the diagram. The dimensions for shaping the bib are given in the diagram at B. The pocket is a 5-inch square with lower corners rounded as shown here at C. The apron ties are cut 6 inches wide and 36 inches long. The strip for the belt should be cut 2½ inches wide and a facing strip the same width should be cut for it. The shoulder straps are cut 4 inches wide and then creased lengthwise through the center.

The strips of the plain material for the ruffles are cut 6 inches wide. The ruffle material before it is gathered should be 2½ times the length of the space it is to fill after gathering. Use the machine hemmer foot shown here at the lower left for hemming the ruffles and the machine ruffler for gathering them.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Christian Science Churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. The Golden Text is from I John: "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

One of the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon presents these words from the Psalms: "Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! . . They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; These see the works of the LORD, and his wonders in the deep. . . He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still."

Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, state: "We must learn that evil is the awful deception and unreality of existence. Evil is not supreme; good is not helpless; nor are the so-called laws of matter primary, and the law of Spirit secondary. . . . The Psalmist saith: 'The Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.'"

War Threat Removed . . . Mexico Seizes Foreign Concerns . . Hull Says We Arm for Peace

Here in confidential conversation are Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana (left), chairman of the senate committee investigating lobbying, and Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach of Washington. The committee's inquiry at present is directed particularly to a campaign against the government reorganization bill and its activities aroused Publisher Frank Gannett to demand its abolition.

Victory for Poland

ONE immediate threat of European war seemed to be dissolved when Lithuania yielded to the demands of Poland for resumption of normal diplomatic and trade relations and virtually gave up its claim to Vilna, former capital of the country, which the Poles seized 18 years ago. General Smigly-Rydz, chief of the Polish army and "strong man" of Poland, had mobilized his troops on the Lithuanian border, and Polish warships were cruising off Memel. So there was nothing for the Liths to do except give in. Polish troops that had been concentrated in Vilna paraded in celebration of the bloodless victory, but in Warsaw the celebration was distorted into a "pogrom" in which riotous throngs attacked all the Jews they could find, killing several and wounding scores. Hundreds of Jewish-owned shops were smashed before the police could restore order.

General Smigly-Rydz

The mobs were made up largely of National Democrats, opposed to the government, who protested that the settlement with Lithuania was too lenient. They demanded that Poland invade and annex Lithuania.

Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, declared that Poland would guarantee Lithuania's independence. The Liths, however, were extremely bitter over the concessions they had been forced to make to their more powerful neighbor.

Mexican Oil Seizures

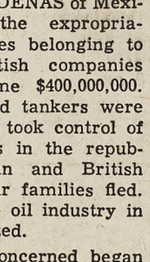
PRESIDENT CARDENAS of Mexico announced the expropriation of oil properties belonging to American and British companies and valued at some $400,000,000. Wells, refineries and tankers were seized and workers took control of all company offices in the republic. The American and British employees and their families fled. For the present the oil industry in Mexico was paralyzed.

The companies concerned began legal action attacking the constitutionality of Cardenas' decree, and it was said would carry the case to the highest court. Both the United States and Great Britain were expected to challenge the seizures and similar action threatened in the case of mines as violation of treaty obligations.

The action of the Mexican government was not entirely unexpected, for it was the culmination of a long and bitter controversy between the oil companies and Mexico's board of labor conciliation and arbitration over a $7,300,000 wage increase ordered by the board.

...ned Peace: No Alliances

...MERICA must pursue its quest ...for world peace, but must follow a policy of arming for protection of its rights against "international lawlessness."



Secy. Hull

...declared Secretary of State Cordell ...n an exposition ...erica's foreign ... and a discussion of all aspects of the world situation. ...ke at the National Press club in ...gton and his ... was broadcast over the land ...other nations ...ef, he set forth a policy of ...o alliances, collaboration with peaceful nations, military preparedness, and opposition to the "seclusionist" viewpoint.

"It is my considered judgment that, in the present state of world affairs, to do less than is now proposed would lay our country open to unpredictable hazards," he said, referring to the naval expansion program.

"The momentous question," he said, "is whether the doctrine of force shall become enthroned once more and bring in its wake, inexorably, international anarchy and a relapse into barbarism."

He did not refer to any nation by name, but his implication with regard to legal recognition of Austria's absorption by Germany and Japan's expansion in China was clear when he said:

"The catastrophic developments of recent years, the startling events of the past weeks, offer a tragic demonstration of how quickly the contagious scourge of treaty-breaking and armed violence spreads from one region to another."

He disclaimed "the slightest intention to entertain any such notion as the use of American armed forces for 'policing the world.'"

He specifically opposed the proposal the United States retire from the Far East.

In the Far East crisis, Hull said, the United States has "consistently collaborated with other peace-seeking nations.

The triumph of the "seclusionist viewpoint," he said, "would inescapably carry the whole world back to the conditions of medieval chaos, conditions toward which some parts of both the eastern and the western worlds are already moving."

House Passes Navy Bill

WITH only a few votes in opposition, the house passed the administration's billion dollar navy bill. The measure authorizes construction of the largest battle fleet in American history by adding 46 combat ships, 22 auxiliaries and 950 airplanes.

The War department announced that army and navy officers were about to study plans for an enlistment program that would put more than two million men under arms within four months of a declaration of war. For this the army would require 1,250,000 recruits and the navy 500,000.

The first 300,000, under existing plans, would be sought as volunteers in the first month, before selective draft machinery like that of 1917-'18 was put into operation. Already prepared for quick submission to congress is a draft of a selective service law.

Morgan Defies F. D. R.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ordered Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority to recant charges against his colleagues or face suspension or ouster, but Mr. Morgan challenged the President's powers to remove him and said flatly that he would not resign.

The chairman asserted:

"I challenge this action by the President and deny his right to remove or suspend me. I stand on that. If I sum up my attitude I can say that I do not choose to run away."

He then took a train for Yellow Springs, Ohio, for a visit with friends.

Morgan told newspaper men he has obtained legal advice on his conflict with the President. At the same time it was learned Mr. Roosevelt uncovered a law under which, advisers assured him, he is empowered to oust the chairman.

Row Over Lobby Inquiry

FRANK GANNETT, publisher of a chain of newspapers, called on the senate to abolish its lobbying investigating committee and to apologize publicly for that committee's "viciously illegal activities." Gannett made his demand as head of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government whose executive secretary, Dr. Edward A. Rumely, faced a contempt of the senate citation for refusing to surrender the organization's private records to the lobby investigators.

Senator Minton

Condemning as "infamous" the committee formerly headed by Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black and now directed by Senator Sherman Minton, Democrat, of Indiana, Gannett charged that its renewed activities are prompted by a desire to "smear and intimidate" his and other organizations fighting the government reorganization bill.

Minton, in a radio debate with Representative James Wadsworth, Republican of New York, struck back at Gannett, declaring that he directs his "propaganda machine from his sunny villa in Florida" and that "he hasn't any more idea of saving you and your Constitution than the Liberty League had." He cautioned listeners not to be misled by press dispatches on administration activities "since 98 per cent of all the metropolitan newspapers are opposed to the administration and do not hesitate to misrepresent it."

Quick work by administration leaders saved the reorganization bill from emasculation in the senate. Six senators shifted and brought about the defeat of the Wheeler amendment requiring congressional approval, by joint resolution, to make effective all executive orders transferring, consolidating or abolishing bureaus and independent agencies.

Would Keep Philippines

PAUL V. McNUTT, high commissioner to the Philippines, has come to the conclusion that if we turn the islands entirely free in 1946 they will become the ground of bloody and long continued warfare. So, with the apparent approval of President Roosevelt, he proposes that the question of their fate be reopened for careful consideration.

Manuel Quezon

McNutt's plan was offered by prearrangement with Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine commonwealth, and that veteran nationalist gave it his instant indorsement. Later he added that there should be no question about the ultimate independence of the islands.

Being convinced that the United States would not undertake protection of an independent Philippine nation from Japan and would not continue a free trade relationship, Quezon has been maneuvering for some time to revise the independence grant and obtain a dominion status.

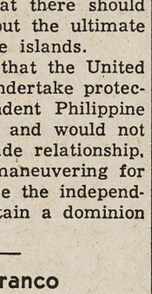
Seek to Curb Franco

REPEATED and intense bombings of Barcelona by Spanish insurgent planes, that killed hundreds of civilians aroused the British and French governments to protest against what they asserted was violation of international law and the principles established by civilized nations. It was said the British asked the Vatican to bring pressure to bear on General Franco to end the bombing of unfortified towns.

The great drive of the insurgent forces toward the east coast was brought to a temporary halt 40 miles from the Mediterranean.

Move by Litvinoff

WAR clouds over Europe were growing dense and alarm increased throughout the world. Securities experienced sharp breaks on the exchanges in America, London, Paris and elsewhere because of the disquieting reports. Cabinets and diplomats everywhere were trying desperately to find a way to peace. The danger seemed to involve at the moment chiefly Czechoslovakia, the civil war in Spain and the possibility of Nazi aggression against Hungary.



Maxim Litvinoff

Maxim Litvinoff, wise commissar for foreign affairs of Soviet Russia, put forth an invitation to the great powers other than Germany, Italy and Japan to confer on joint action aimed at "checking further development of aggression and eliminating increased danger of a new world massacre." The United States was asked to participate in this action.

France and Russia formally notified Czechoslovakia that they would give that nation armed support against any aggressive action by Germany. Great Britain, while not going so far as this, warned Hitler that it expected him to observe the assurances he had given that he would not attack the Czechs.

Demand Diapers for Dogs

San Diego.—"Diapers for dogs" were demanded by A. Taxpayer in a letter filed with the city council. "Dogs which run at large and ruin our lawns, flowers and shrubs should be required by law to wear diapers, and their owners should be made to pay the dogs' laundry bills," he wrote. "Five or six dogs invade my yard daily, turning over garbage pails and ruining everything. San Diego is a dog city. I've never seen a place where there are so many dogs."

It is understood he will receive $10,000 for the engagement.

San Francisco.—Married people have a better chance of keeping out of the poorhouse, according to Health Director Geiger. After a survey of San Francisco's poorhouse, Dr. Geiger revealed statistics showing but 15 per cent of the inmates were married. Forty-one per cent had never been married. Thirty-one per cent were widowed. The rest were divorced. "The survey," said Dr. Geiger, "seems to indicate the advisability of marriage for the stability of the home."

Burke, one of the county's earliest settlers, came to California from Canada 69 years ago. He operated his smithy until a few years ago. His shop, believed the oldest such establishment in Tulare County, still is in operation.

Swallows Return to Mission

San Juan Capistrano.—The swallows returned to the old mission here on St. Joseph's Day, maintaining a schedule unbroken for at least 161 years, according to legend. The birds will stay until San Juan's Day, next October 23. Where they go is a mystery.

Stream Fishing Doomed by Floods

Sequoia National Park.—Fishing in the mountains will be greatly reduced this year as the result of floods, foresters said. Huge boulders rolled downstream in the December flood and crushed many fish which lie dormant in quiet pools during December and January. Receding waters disclosed thousands of dead fish along sand bars where they had been thrown by waves. The older fish, which would have bred new generations this summer, were destroyed.

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Precious MINERAL SALTS

That You Must Have in Order to Build Strong Bones, Sound Teeth, Healthy Nerves, Rich Red Blood

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

THE human body is often compared to a machine, but it is far more wonderful, far more complex, than the most intricate machine ever designed to run without stopping, day in and day out, for upwards of 70 years, is also a fully equipped chemical laboratory. For if a chemist should grind a man to bits and analyze the pieces, he would find at least 18 chemical elements, and possibly traces of several others.

In addition to oxygen, carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen, the body contains a wide variety of mineral materials, which are necessary to its proper functioning—and even to life itself. The list includes calcium, phosphorus, potassium, sulphur, sodium, chlorine, magnesium, iron, manganese, iodine and copper. All these substances must be furnished to the growing child—through food and drink—and generous amounts must also be supplied daily in the diet of adults, to replace the minerals that are constantly being used up.

Minerals Necessary to Life

It is vitally important that the homemaker should understand the function of these various salts and where they can be found. For if certain minerals are lacking in the body, the heart will stop beating. Without others, the bones cannot form properly. Still others are responsible for the rich red blood that makes the difference between a healthy person and a sickly one. Laboratory experiments have proved that if you leave out the smallest trace of the mineral known as manganese, you destroy the love of a mother for her child. And nutritionists—but unfortunately not mothers—are well aware that less than a thousandth of an ounce of iodine makes all the difference between a normal man and an imbecile.

Calcium—Captain of Minerals

Calcium deserves its ranking position as the captain of the minerals, because it builds the bones, or body framework. And the bony skeleton is to the human being what steel is to a building. Calcium is also the chief constituent of the teeth and upon healthy teeth rests the health of the digestive system and, in turn, the entire body. For food that is improperly masticated is imperfectly digested and fails to nourish properly.

About 99 per cent of the calcium in the body is found in the teeth and bones. If the body does not receive an adequate supply of this mineral in pre-natal life and during the growing years, the bones will be porous, distorted and easily broken, and the teeth will develop cavities and eventually may fall out.

In addition to being the principal material for making and maintaining the bones and teeth, calcium increases the strength and pulsations of the heart and helps the blood coagulate in case of injury, thus keeping you and your loved ones from bleeding to death. That is why an extra supply of calcium is fed to patients just before an operation.

Calcium Builds Will Power

There is a close relationship between calcium and sound, healthy nerves. And this precious substance likewise helps us to concentrate mentally—it strengthens our will power—and assists us in acquiring that "do or die" attitude toward life, which is essential in an age when we must all struggle or go under.

Yet despite its importance, it is estimated by that outstanding authority, Henry C. Sherman, Professor of Nutrition at Teachers College, Columbia University, that one-half of the American people—even those with plenty of money—are literally starving for calcium, because they do not know the food sources of this vitally important mineral.

Where to Obtain Calcium

The foremost sources of calcium are milk and cheese, which is milk in concentrated form. It is chiefly to provide adequate calcium that homemakers must follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child, and a pint for each adult.

Vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, celery, asparagus, string beans, cabbage, carrots and cauliflower are also a good supplementary source of calcium. And some fruits, such as oranges, figs, strawberries and bananas likewise supply significant amounts.

Indispensable Phosphorus

Like calcium, phosphorus is required by the body in relatively large amounts, and like calcium, it is especially important in the diet of children, because it is deposited in the bones, along with calcium, as calcium phosphate.

Phosphorus is indispensable for all the active tissues in the body and plays an important part in regulating the neutrality of the blood. It can be obtained from whole grain cereals, eggs, dried beans, cheese, lean meats, and root and leafy vegetables.

Iron—King Pin of Them All

But measured in terms of food essentials, iron is king pin of them all. It is the supreme element in nutrition because it is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood. And it is the hemoglobin which carries purifying oxygen to every cell in the body. Recently, it has been discovered that copper is required for the proper utilization of iron.

"Red blooded" is a term understood by everyone to denote health and strength, and it is iron that makes us red blooded. When your children grow pale and listless, lose their pep and lack appetite, it is likely that they are starving for iron. If you become short of breath and "pant" when going up hill, or upstairs, even though there is nothing wrong with your heart or lungs, the chances are that there is insufficient red pigment in the blood—not enough to take up an adequate supply of oxygen and carry it to the millions of cells throughout the body.

There is no excuse for cheating yourself or your children of a full measure of iron, for this mineral can easily be obtained from liver, egg yolk, whole grain cereals, molasses, dried fruits, dried peas and beans, nuts, lean meats and green vegetables.

Iodine—Molder of Men

Almost everyone has heard that iodine is the mineral which helps to prevent that disfiguring enlargement of the neck, known as simple goiter. But few people realize that it is the principal constituent of thyroxin, secretion of the thyroid gland, and that the thyroid functions normally only when sufficient iodine is available.

A wide variety of physiological disorders have been laid to iodine hunger. Obesity is frequently the result of thyroid disturbance. Specialists contend that stubborn skin diseases are associated with disorders of this gland. Many people are accused of laziness who are really suffering from thyroid deficiency. And competent authorities claim that the thyroid likewise influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

competent authorities claim that the thyroid likewise influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

Iodine is found chiefly in seafood and in fruits and vegetables grown near the sea. In inland regions, where soil and water are poor in iodine, health authorities frequently add it to the drinking water. And the use of iodized salt is also recommended. By these simple measures, thousands of growing children can be saved from the disastrous results of iodine deficiency.

In general, it can be said that if the minerals calcium, phosphorus, iron and iodine are supplied in adequate amounts, the other minerals will be automatically furnished.

But every homemaker should make it her solemn responsibility to provide these four in abundance. For only in that way can you insure optimal growth in children, develop vigorous health in adults, and maintain the highest possible tone of every organ in the body.

To the Housewife

IN THIS issue you will find the fourth of the series of articles written by C. Houston Goudiss, famous food expert whose books, radio talks and lectures have made him known all over the country.

In this article Mr. Goudiss discusses the vitally important subject, "Mineral Salts." He shows the necessity of these materials in the diet, and their relation to the building of a strong heart, healthy nerves, rich red blood, strong bones and sound teeth. He also gives the food sources of these salts.

Read each one of these articles as they appear weekly in this newspaper. They will prove invaluable to the housewife in assisting her to keep the entire family mentally and physically fit.

A Splendid "Service" for Floors

Floors receive rougher treatment than any other part of the home—and it is floors that show up to poorest advantage when neglected—best advantage, when properly cared for! Up to now, attractive floors have required some little time and attention, but this is no longer necessary. For into the field of domestic preparations has come "self-polishing wax"—liquid-smooth, simple to apply, lovely to see. This remarkable preparation goes on easily, quickly, and dries in 20 minutes! Its results are 4-fold: The floors are protected—they are preserved—they stay freshly-clean longer—and they are beautified! A quality self-polishing wax protects and preserves, by forming a film over the surface—hard enough to withstand friction and grinding wear-and-tear. It induces floors to stay clean longer, because dirt and grease cannot become imbedded in the wood. It beautifies, because it is shimmering, transparent, and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. And what more could the home-maker ask for? There are, however, various qualities of self-polishing wax available. Only the best should be used, for both the appearance and condition of the floors. But the finest self-polishing wax is a joy to use—its lasting results a joy to see!

FLOORS POLISH THEMSELVES

$6,668,498,000 pays the local taxes for a total property roll (assessed value) of $8,035,810,000!

Individual tax-dodgers cannot be charged with sole responsibility for the tax-exemption evil, however. Private property which is tax exempt aggregates $318,332,000 in assessed value. Government property on the tax exempt list totals $1,048,980,000!

And the biggest single item in the government tax exempt category is "property of city governments," totaling $506,265,000. Much of this property, of course, represents the holdings of municipal ownership enterprises — gas and electric systems, water projects, street railways, et cetera. In many instances, they may be desrable projects, although many others — all facts were considered—would be found to be inefficient and costly.

But entirely apart from their desirability, as the particular community may judge them, all such projects take property off the tax rolls—increasing tax rates, without compensating benefits, for farmers and others not in a position to be served by them. And adding insult to injury, most of such developments are financed by the issuance of tax- exempt securities.

It has frequently been charged by public ownership enthusiasts that California agriculture is opposed to publicly owned utilities. That charge is entirely spurious. California agriculture is merely opposed to carrying urban burdens. If public ownership projects paid taxes on the same basis as privately owned projects, agriculture would not be a party at interest. But under present conditions, every additional tax exemption for city property means additional taxation for rural property. City business men and industrialists — and city taxpayers generally — might understand rural California's position better, if the $.000 homestead tax exemption became effective. But rural California can't afford to be a party to such a costly lesson.

MEET YOUR SON

If you think you have a boy problem, your son, in all probobility, is equally confident he has a parent problem to grapple with. And likely he is as nearly correct as you for uncomfortable as the realization may be, the majority of boy problems are parent made—or at least, might have been parent prevented.

We are talking, remember, not of problem boys, but of boy problems. There's a world of difference. We speak very gibly today of problem boys. Actually there are few of them. But there are plenty of normal youngsters who for one reason or another have become problems for the time being.

That is a logical development when parents don't know how to find out what's going on in their boy's mind—or when parents are too preoccupied wth their own affairs to remember that their son has to cross some pretty thin ice on the way to manhood.

An accentuated case of another kind was indicated the other day when a woman of otherwise exemplary intelligence whom we were visiting, suddenly, loudly wailed, "Roger! For heaven's sake, stop sticking your pen knife into the sofa!" Then turning to the rest of us with a distracted wit's end countenance: "What do you think that boy did yesterday?...." And she recited a long tale of Roger's misdeeds—very much to Roger's gratification.

Practicaly every boy problem I have ever encountered could have been avoided had the youngster not been afflicted with a parent problem at some crucial moment. In tracing thousands of such problems I have found that most of them incubate from comparatively insignificnt happenings n early childhood. It is a hideous phenomenon, for instance, that a small fear, a misunderstanding or a bit of misinformation can ferment and seethe and grow in a boy's mind to such grotesque proportions that it blockades both hs normal train of thought and his mental reactions. He worries, half consciously, perhaps abnormally. Then he does become a problem.

There are countless sources of such blockades, and too often the fault properly may be laid at the parents' door. I am going to cite several such cases. And I am confident that open minded parents, lookng carefully, may find a few of their own family skeletons among them.

THE MAN AT THE KEYHOLE!

By Operative WB

William E. Riker's convention of gubernatorial candidates at Sacramento in May is oing to be a one man performance, we learn, if Riker shows up. The other aspirants have cold shouldered the dea of getting to gether in a hotel room and settling all campaign issues without forensic bloodshed. But Riker, king of the Holy city religious colony near Los Gatos, isn't disappointed. The publicity is good. Oh, yes, Riker's also a candidate!

Their good friends merely smile and wink as Helen Wills and Tallant Tubbs deny the reports that they're looking for a preacher. But something is taking Helen's mind off her campaign to win back her tennis laurels, and we get pretty straight information that it's the San Francisco business man and one time candidate for United States Senator.

Press agents, like other mortals, sometimes get tangled up in their own words. Most curious political endorsement of the week is the following from Greely Kolts, Merriam publicist: "The cautious, conservative nature of Governor Merriam is often mistaken for indecision and lack of complete understanding of a proposition!"

A PLACE TO PARK

The American Automoble Association calls the parking problem "the nation's greatest dilemma."

It's a dilemma, but some of us can think of greater ones, like finding the cash to pay for the car!

WOMEN IN THE NEWS

Somewhere in America, smilingly confident or breathlessly unsure, are nearly two million women—scheduled, accordng to statistical averages, to be married before December 31, 1938.

In April, should only 200,000 bachelors decide to relinquish that status, it will be a slow month indeed in the nation's marrage marts. And if a mere quarter of a million dream girls—young or old, black and white, representing every race, color and creed, say, "I do!" at altar parsonage or wicket, the averages for the period will be no better than par.

Ensuing months, however, will tell a different tale, for orange blossom time is at hand. Springtime, for centuries on end, has announced itself in a flurry of good wishes, old shoes, showers of rice, and high hopes for happiness ever after!

But the uncompromising fact finders, relentlessly grinding out their statistical grist, dash those nopes with the chilling announcement that some two hundred thousands of this year's newly weds will fail literally to live up to their wedding day promises, and fail, consequently, to find the story book finale of happiness. For two hundred thousands, the final chapter will be written in the divorce courts!

Spotlighting the fundamental cause for mounting divorce rates are other startling reports, whose statistical sources are not to be challenged, currently in the news. Ther unequivocal answer is: Money! Arguments over regular housekeeping allowances; charges of selfish use of family income; the clink and clank of cold, hard cash, sounding its harsh, metallic note, creatng the final discord, those say the experts, are prevailing reasons for divorce!

Without question, the finding will evoke some astonishment. Many women, and men, too, will find it easier to concur in another statement in the matter, released by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on the eve of her recent trip to California. "Varying codes of ethics and standards of conduct" is a chief reason for matrimonial smash up, in the opinion of America's first lady. "Love," she said "flies quickly, when respect is gone."

Because that reasoning reaches deeper into fundamental things, it rings more soundly than all the careful polls and ballots yet assembled. For, as most of the brides and grooms, and the majority of the long married folk must agree, a very little money can carry a couple a long, long way, when it's bolstered and back logged wth mutual respect and admiration.

A Step Ahead

BY DON

We read, somewhere, that in one evening of dancing the average distance covered is something in the neighborhood of fifteen miles. Just what means were employed to estimate the the mileage, or whether or not it can be accepted as accurate, is in our judgement, not half as important as the fact that it may demonstrate the real, healthful exercise in the pastime.

We are aware, of course, that some dancing is still classed among the things taboo, but, it seems to us properly conducted a dance can be one of the finest things that could happen to our people who ride too much and exercise too little.

Now, when every one seems to own a car, motorcycle, plane or some means of transportation any thing that may stimulate and encourage that most healthful of all practise, walking, is a thing worth while. In fact, some communites sponsor dances once or twice a week with nothing more in mind than the physical as well as social well being of its citizens.

In some prominent health institutes regular daily hikes form a very important part in the rebuilding of the body softened by too much ease and luxury. "Lucky" said one doctor, "Is the man or woman today who is forced to employ every musscle of his body in daily toil." In as much as it is possible, every individual should set aside a part of each day to exercise that physical part of himself that is just as purely animal as his four legged friends.

Not so much a cure all, as some fanatics would have us believe, a small amount of physical exercise, daily, is considered the preventitive of a great number of minor disabilities, which contribute their weakness to a more serious condition. In these days of avoiding physical exertion, B O and rough hands a good, honest to gosh sweat is becoming a thing of the past. More and more, we avoid those things we need most in physical health.

One need but visit a public playground to avail himself of an opportunity to do his physical self a good turn but he will probably be content with shuffle board, checkers or just looking on, rather than try a bit of tennis, volley ball or that good game of baseball.

Deprive any animal of a minimum amount of normal exercise and one will, in time, have an ailing and soft animal to nurse. In spite of our exalted opinion of ourselves, we are animals first of all. And all the brains in the world cannot replace the rich content one enjoys when the body is in good health.

Some of us are not able to participate in strenuous exercise, but most of us can walk, if we will. As a matter of preserving good health most of us should be willing.

Troubles

There's times, when things are upside down,
I'd like to get away,
And leave them all a-standing there
Until some other day.

But seems, that trouble grows with time,
The same as any thing;
It sort of sprouts and goes to root,
Instead of taking wing.

And, so, I guess my Dad was right,
When long ago he said,
"If trouble gets to pushing you,
Don't run, but fight, instead.
